

Near Denver, Colorado's Hot Springs Trail

Provider: Kathryn Brockman

Looking to get into hot water? Head for Colorado's Hot Springs Trail! Three hours from Denver awaits a relaxing world of geothermal springs from the earth's core that nourishes a booming Colorado spa industry—set amid a kaleidoscope of towering mountains, raging whitewaters, and spiritual valleys. It's all here, including the world's largest outdoor hot mineral springs swimming pool, family-style hot springs resort, spiritual valley hot springs center, South-Pacific-Island-style mud bath hot springs, and underground soaking caves. En route: a mountaintop, open-air swing-flying over a huge canyon; river rafting; wine tasting; tundra; alligators; UFOs, and some legendary folk. Relax! Enjoy!

Tips in this Tour:

-  You don't have to bring a swimsuit! But bring warm clothing and sunscreen. In higher elevations, you're nearly sun-kissing, plus the whitewaters and the tundra summit of the Continental Divide are ice-cold year-round, thanks to the Rocky Mountains.
-  You can enhance your hot mineral springs soak and swim with professional spa body treatments, many combining local herb products with historic, native rituals.
-  The mineral hot springs are open year-round, close to popular winter ski resorts, like Aspen and Vail. This makes Colorado's Hot Springs Trail very cool, every day of the year!
-  Each hot mineral springs offers its own varieties of pool admission, overnight accommodations, treatments, and combination discounts, not available through travel agencies or web consolidators. Ask directly or check the individual websites.
-  Speed limits are visitor-friendly! Drive too fast and you'll miss the startling wildlife, thundering waterfalls, and other jaw-dropping scenery tucked along the roadsides - or careen off the hairpin mountain turns! Drive too slow and you could irritate the loca
